VILLAGE OF JACKSON

“Your Small Town, with a Big Sense of Community”

The Village of Jackson is located thirty miles northwest of Milwaukee at the intersection of US Highway 45 (USH 45) and Wisconsin State Highway 60 (STH 60). Jackson is an ideal place for people to live and work. It enjoys many of the conveniences of a large city yet has a small-town atmosphere. We are one of the fastest growing communities in Washington County, with a population of 7,199 estimated by the Wisconsin Department of Administration as of January 2019.

A LITTLE HISTORY ABOUT JACKSON

Jackson was named after President Andrew Jackson. Prior to 1872, Jackson was one of three small, unincorporated hamlets located in the towns of Jackson and Polk, none of which appeared to be more important than the other. Once known as Riceville (from the English misspelling of a German name) this little hamlet developed on 400 acres acquired by a German immigrant named Franz Reis.

When the railroad was built from Milwaukee to Fond du Lac, Reis offered the community a site for a depot. The railroad remained a vital force in the development of Jackson for years to come. Trains ran frequently and milk was transported to Milwaukee from the Jackson depot. Some long-time residents of Jackson can recall commuting by train to high school classes in West Bend.

With the railroad passing through his farm and trains stopping at his front door, Reis saw an opportunity to profit from his gift. In 1873, he built a large general store, a saloon, and a grain elevator. Later he added a second elevator and a store. The community was growing, and before long, it had two blacksmith shops, a carpenter shop, a hardware store, and (according to a county history written in 1881) “a number of neat stone dwellings.” The railroad remained a vital force in the development of Jackson.

On March 14, 1912, the hamlet called Jackson was incorporated as a Village. By that time, the Village had added a cheese factory, a post office, and a hotel. In 1918, Gilbert H. Gilbert Company built a blacksmith shop. The building on Main Street is currently the home of Jackson Truck Body, a manufacturer of truck bodies.

In 1920, the Village had a resident population of 230 people. Rockfield Canning Company moved into the Village. Like its predecessors, Rockfield Canning Company chose a location adjacent to the railroad. It was later sold to Seneca Foods, then Northland Cranberries, and is currently the site of Cranberry Creek Condominiums, located behind the current Village Hall. Other early businesses included Held’s Feed Mill, Jackson Lumber Yard, Pete Pauley’s Race Horses, and Green Valley Dairy.

During the three decades following 1920, little development took place in the Village, with the 1930 census showing a slight decline in resident population. By 1940, the Village’s population began to increase again. In 1950, the census reported a population of 361. From 1950 to 1970, the population increased slightly. Two major industries and several small businesses also came to the Village.

In 1955, the cheese factory was purchased by George Bursock Industries, Inc., which manufactured medical supplies. Later, Will Ross, Inc. purchased this plant and constructed the new Badger Laboratories Division building in 1960. Kerry Foods Inc., a large manufacturer of instant food products, became the current owner, in 1986. Other industries and businesses moved into the Village, including Kettle Moraine Coatings, Inc., a plastic coating plant, Rex Cabinets, Ozaukee Pattern Company, Inc., and Sundance Photo.

In 1981, Quality Stamping built a new factory in Jackson, and in 1987, Rytex Inc. established a factory to manufacture warehouse doors. Wisconsin Pharmacal was annexed to the Village in 1985. Businesses expanded and in the Village. A mobile home development of 231 homes, Green Valley Manufactured Home Community was also established. In May of 1981, construction of a new Wastewater Treatment Plant was completed. The facilities have been updated for future growth.

Twenty years of industrial and commercial growth established the Village's strong and diversified economic base. Recent years have shown an extraordinary growth in residential and industry development, as well as population. The 1970 census recorded the Village at a population of 561. The 1975 Wisconsin Department of Administration estimated population was 1,895. In 1994 the population was listed at 3,549 residents.

The industrial and commercial base of the Village contributes approximately one third of the annual local tax revenues needed to provide the services of the Village, with the residential base providing the remaining local revenues.
